Elders: Robert Beard, Bill Eads, Johnny Mitchell,
Ralph Mitchell, Bob Turner

May 20, 2018

There are things that I like to see every day. When I come home, I like to see a made bed. When I get up in the morning, I like to see a sink that has no dirty dishes. When I check the grades of my children, I like to see all A's. There are also things I like to see during the week. On Friday afternoons, I like to see a clean desk, and on Monday mornings I like to see freshly cut grass. I love seeing these images because it means that everything has an order.

Of course in order to see these things, it means that I have to make my bed in the morning, clean the dishes at night, cut the grass on the weekend (when I say "I" it means "Jaheim"), and clean my desk before I leave. If we are going to have an ordered life, it means that we have to participate in the ordering of it. In our current culture and society, the idea of customs, traditions, and order is frowned upon. But I think that responsibility, chores, and duties actually lead to a happier life.

In Psalm 119:133, the writer says Order my steps in your word and let not any iniquity have dominion over me. The Psalmist claims over and over that he loves the law of the Lord, and that he longs to do what it says. There are many people who think that psalms like this are legalistic or boring. But I think that they are very important. The law was given to order Israel's life according to the beat of God's rhythm. And I think that those who follow the rules, do their duty, and abide by the covenant experience much more freedom in their life than those who choose to live without order or responsibility.

I'm sure there are things in life that you like to do or see, and I know that all of us have a certain way we like things to look or to be. But in order to get good results, it will require us dedicate ourselves to principles, ethics, and values. God calls us to an ordered life, not because he likes to tell you what to do; but because it will make you appreciate what you've done.

Love you all,
Adam
