This week some of us finally saw the sun come out for a few days. Grass is growing, some of my flowers are blooming, and this morning, even the birds can be heard singing. Spring is on the way! Finally, no more brown leaves or chances of snow. I'm glad to see the cold weather on the way out.

Yet even though I am grateful for the coming of warm weather and the arrival of the summer season, I have to remind myself to be careful not to wish away half of the year. I often forget that every day (no matter how cold) and every season (no matter how wet) is a gift from God. I have to continue to remember what Solomon said and see every time and moment as a reason to rejoice and an opportunity to do good (Ecclesiastes 3:12).

We all have this unfortunate habit. We will waste time wishing away opportunities, challenges, and seasons and never stop to consider the value in change and circumstance. We tell ourselves that we'll finally be happy when the time arrives or if something happens. We condition our contentment upon the coming of weather or the timing of people. And unfortunately, when we wait to be happy...we never are.

Let us rejoice in the season we have been given. Let us use every opportunity to give thanks and rejoice in what God has done. And us welcome Spring by holding on to the winter for just one more day.

Love you all,

Adam
