Reading of the Word

As we consider all that God has done for us, we like David, need to honor and praise Him. In reading the Psalms, we are reminded of the greatness of God.

He is the creator of everything. Nothing was created without him. He has shown his great love for mankind by sending Jesus to teach us and provide salvation. In this passage we are told "Let every creature praise his holy name". Robert Beard

Reading for the week: Psalms 145

Wednesday, January 26th

We will have a Wednesday Night Meal prepared for you and your family this Wednesday night.

We will have a special guest celebrating 15 years of addiction free living! Many at Una played a part in helping Martha Wright overcome obstacles and addictions. She will be with us on the 26th to say Thank You to those who helped her along the way.

Please SIGN UP and join us and celebrate with her at our Wednesday Night Fellowship Meal this week!

Do Your Friends Know What You Believe?

Do your friends know about Jesus? Do they know that Jesus is important to you? Do you know that God established a righteous standard that governs your life? How will they ever know unless you tell them? The reality is that we can hope and pray for our friends to come to know the Lord each and everyday (which we should), but we have to tell them about Him.

Sometimes we don't feel comfortable talking about "religious things." Many people will say things like, "What if they ask a questions that I don't know the answer to?" This might happen, but the real reason for our fear is the fear of rejection. We are scared that they might turn us down and it will damage the relationship. Consider how the relationship will end on that great day if they never know Jesus.

We need to help create in each of us a spirit of servanthood. One where we serve our friends and family, and through our service, we point them to Christ. This isn't a sneaky way of evangelizing, because we are called to serve, but a byproduct of our service is an open door to explain why we serve.
